CATCH THE ANSWER

The host gives information on previously prepared topics, then asks questions from the contestants, and wants to get back the correct answer.

In this format there are 4 contestants, and 3 different topic categories with 4 questions. The first category is about the information: the host provides information regarding the question he/she is going to ask, and then wants the correct answer. The tasks in this category are worth of 1000 points.

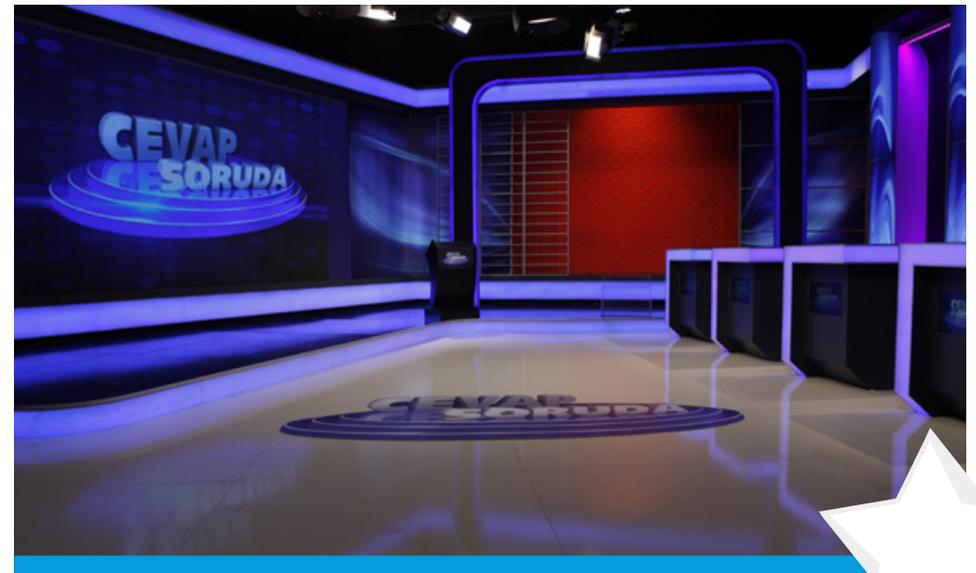

The second category is when the answer is hidden in the questions: the host wants the hear back he information regarding the question he/she is going to ask, and which information were provided the contestants in the previous category. The contestants have to catch the correct answer among the given information. The tasks in this category are worth of 2000 points.

The third category is a mind-game: the answer for the question is not only hidden in the question, but requires quite a mind-game, as well. The tasks in this category are worth of 3000 points.

In all the categories, the points are divided between the contestants who knew the right answer. If a person answers the question correctly all by him/herself, the points are doubled. The contestant who has the most points after 12 questions, gets to the final, where they will be asked one single question. If (s)he gives the correct answer, (s)he wins the prize and earns the right to participate in the next day's game. If (s)he gives an incorrect answer, (s)he will be eliminated. If (s)he refuses to give any kind of answer, (s)he gets the 1/10 of the prize and will continue with the game on the next day.
